Skin Microbiota 2015

Towards a New Era in Dermocosmetics

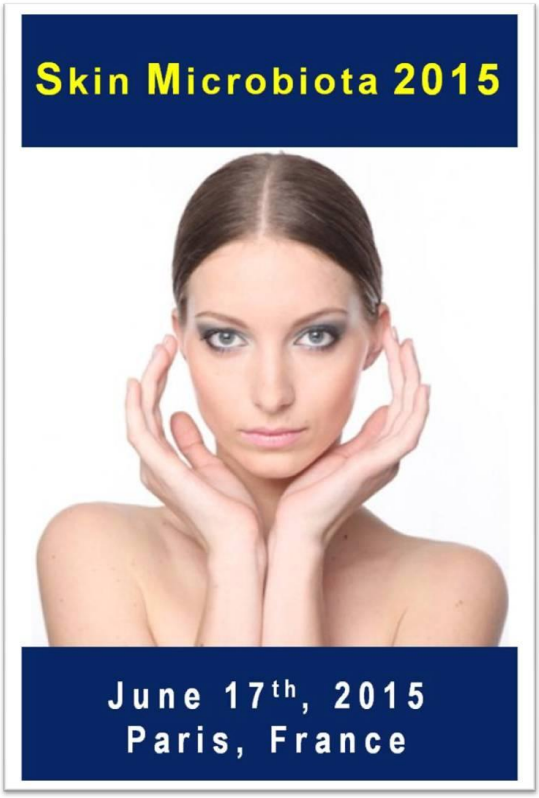
June 17 2015 - Paris

Regarding recent advances showing the wide-range implication of gut microbiota in human health, the International Society of Microbiota decided to focus during one day on the most diversified ecosystem in the human body: the skin microbiota.

Apart from its connexion with the skin immune system, can skin microbiota modulate skin homeostasis and health?

To address this question, the Scientific Committee is pleased to announce the organization of the First ISM Symposium on Skin Microbiota 2015: Towards on a New Era in Dermocosmetics, on June 17th 2015, in Paris. The aim of the Skin Microbiota 2015 will be to discuss recent advances in skin microbiota, its characterization, its role and clinical impact. We will highlight the latest innovation targeting skin microbiota.



Among Skin Microbiota 2015 sessions:

- Human Skin Microbiota 2015: Recent Advances & Perspectives
- Human Skin Microbiota & Environment: Advances and Applications in Dermocosmetics
- Human Skin Microbiota & Skin Pathologies : Innovations in Medicalized Cosmetics

Call for abstracts and innovations:

The Scientific Committee of International Society of Microbiota invites all scientists, academics and industrials to present their last advances on scientific research, devices development, formulation, sequencing products and others skin microbiota-related fields. We will welcome in particular clinical innovations (biomarkers and intervention studies).

Please be reminded that ISM wishes to in order to gather all actors in the microbiota field, through its Microbiota Platform Networking.

Skin Microbiota 2015

Towards a New Era in Dermocosmetics

June 17th 2015 - Paris

Preliminary Agenda

Among speakers already confirmed:

Dr Chris Callewaert, Laboratory of Microbial Ecology and Technology, Ghent, Belgium

Dr. Nadim Cassir, Unité de Recherche sur les Maladies Tropicales Emergentes, Marseilles, France

Dr. Francisco M. Codoñer, LifeSequencing, Paterna, Spain

Pr. Lionel Fry, Department of Medecine, Imperial College, UK

Dr Alexander Gordon James, Unilever Discover, London, UK

Dr Sara Romano-Bertrand, CHRU Montpellier, Montpellier, France

Pr Tewes Tralau, Federal Institute for Risk Assessment, Berlin, Germany

We hope that you will join us for this dynamic and strategic program and look forward to welcoming you in Paris.

Dr Yuri Ikeda
Chairman of the International Society of Microbiota

First ISM Symposium

Skin Microbiota 2015

June 17th 2015 - Paris

8h00 Welcoming & Registration of Attendees

9h00 Introduction by Targeting Human Skin Microbiota 2015 Chairpersons

Session 1: Human Skin Microbiota 2015: Recent Advances & Perspectives

How can we characterize human skin microbiota in 2015?
Recent advances in sequencing techniques and analysis.
How can microbiota from different niches communicate with each other?
Why should we consider skin microbiota as our second immune system?
Questions and Discussion

9h05 Insights on Human Microbiota & Focus on Skin Microbiota

Pr Tewes Tralau, Federal Institute for Risk Assessment, Berlin, Germany

9h45 How to sequence and analyze microbiota? Technical and Practical Issues
How to standardize protocols for exploring skin microbiota?
All you need to know about recent methods, devices and platforms

Dr Francisco Codoñer, Life Sequencing, Paterna, Spain

10h30 Coffee Break

Session 2: Human Skin Microbiota & Environment: Advances and Applications in Dermocosmetics

Can stress influence skin microbiota?
Can sun exposure and ultraviolet exposure influence diversity of skin microbiota?
How are ageing and skin microbiota related?
Can antiseptics found in skin formulations impair skin microbiota?
Can skin care products and their formulation influence skin microbiota?
How to target axillary microbiota to prevent body odour?

11h00 Microbiological and biochemical origins of human axillary odour: Strategies to target human skin microbiota

Dr Alexander Gordon James, Unilever Discover, London, UK

11h45 Skin Microbiota, Textile & Body Odour: Artificial Sweat Composition to Grow and Sustain a Mixed Human Axillary Microbiome

Dr Christ Callewaert, Laboratory of Microbial Ecology and Technology, Ghent, Belgium

12h30 Lunch Break

14h00 Skin Microbiota & Impact of Antiseptics: Effects of Chlorhexedrine

Dr Nadim Cassir, Unité de Recherche sur les Maladies Infectieuses, Tropicales, Emergentes, Marseille, France

14h30 Skin microbiota and impact of the hospitalization: special focus on surgical pressures

Dr Sara Romano Bertrand, CHRU Montpellier, Montpellier, France

15h00 Short Oral Presentation, upon abstract submission

15h30 Coffee Break

Session 3: Human Skin Microbiota & Skin Pathologies: Innovations in Medicalized Cosmetics

How skin microbiota vary in skin diseases?
Focus on atopic dermatitis, psoriasis, acne and rosacea.
Can probiotics be used to treat and/or prevent skin-related diseases?

16h00 Skin Microbiota & Skin Pathologies: Generalities and Focus on Psoriasis

Pr. Lionel Fry, Department of Medecine, Imperial College, UK

16h45 Skin Microbiota & Atopic Dermatitis: Recent Advances and Therapeutic Strategies (TBC)

17h30 Short Oral Presentation, upon abstract submission

18h00 Call for innovations on human skin microbiota
The Scientific Committee of International Society of Microbiota invites all scientists, academics and industrials to present their last advances within the area of Human Skin Microbiota on scientific research, devices development, formulation, sequencing products and other skin microbiota-related fields.

18h30 Discussion & Conclusion of Skin Microbiota 2015 in presence of the scientific committee and speakers
Can we manipulate skin microbiota?

Skin Microbiota 2015 Awards:

- Scientific Contribution Award 2015
- Young Scientific Contribution for Oral Contribution

Concluding Remarks by the chairpersons

19h00 End of Skin Microbiota 2015
